

Luxury units retain value

Despite uncertainty in the real estate market, interest in luxury residential units still appears to be very strong.

“Development of luxury apartments is a niche with a relatively small supply. This product is aimed at a target group which is resilient to changes in prosperity,” said Ewa Perkowska, sales director at Budimex Nieruchomości.

“No matter what the current economic situation, there are still people able to pay a lot of money for a property in a prestigious location ... In the long run the investor will profit,” she added.